Forty-four To Take Physicals

Students in Class "1-D" Will Be Given Exams This Month

Forty-four university students who have received Selective Service questionnaires and who were placed in "1-D," the temporarily deferred classification, will be required to take physical examinations in about two weeks, Chairman Arthur L. Quinn of the Missoula board stated yesterday. Examinations will be given in the university gymnasium at a date to be announced soon.

Students who received questionnaires were placed in the "1-D" classification and were allowed to defer training until July 1 to allow them to complete the school year. There are about 230 students in Montana who are in class "1-D."

Blanks asking students for information about their physical condition, which will be mailed immediately, must be returned promptly to the board, stated Selective Service officials. They said students should not wait five days before returning these blanks, as they were allowed to do with questionnaires.

ARMED TO THE TEETH BUT NO BITE

Along with our unending twenty-five year war cycle, the men of our nation get their compulsory but revealing physical examination mirroring the course of the nation's health and our standards of living. This time it's our teeth.

Dental defects have been the major cause for rejection of Selective Service registrants at the time of physical examination, Colonel Leonard G. Rountree, chief of the medical division of national headquarters, Selective Service system, told the committee on preparedness.

Records now available show that 17 per cent of the rejections by Selective Service examiners have been for dental defects, and that 22 per cent of the men rejected at army induction stations have been for the same cause.

These statistics indicate that perhaps the nation is "living the life of Reilly," especially as regards its food, but when a local Missoula dentist recently stated that a few university men had been down to have perfectly good teeth pulled merely to evade the draft, which foolish request he refused, then perhaps it isn't alone poor teeth which trouble the minority of American youth.—D.R.C.

Spring Brings Memories

Daddy Aber, Inspiration of Clean-Up Day, Once Scrubbed Main Hall Basement Floors So an Athlete Could Play Football

Present balmy weather brings visions of spring on the campus—beer picnics and nice picnics, trees turning green, interscholastic and, of course, that institution—Aber day—when politicians get a drift of their chances, of hamburgers and pickles at noon in front of the Natural Science building, and the clean-up in the morning. What most students do not know is that Aber day is a holiday in honor of Professor William Aber, a faculty member for 24 years on the campus.

Aber day was formally instituted in 1915 under its present name at the suggestion of Dr. Charles W. Leaphart, then dean of the law school. Daddy Aber, as he was familiarly called, was active in developing the school and every year, even prior to 1915, had organized the students for a spring clean-up. At this time students raked leaves, trimmed trees and cleaned up the campus.

Round Up Stragglers

The Kaimin issue of April 16, 1915, reads, "The four biggest men in school have been picked to round up stragglers, and it will go hard with one who dares to defy the authority of the police quartet."

The present mock trial, over which seniors in the law school preside on the afternoon of Aber day, is a hold-over from the original day. Students who shirked work were punished with a paddle or made to sing before the court. In 1931 the trial was abolished, but in recent years has made its appearance again.

At first the trial was followed by track events for men and women and a dance on the cement tennis courts. The Kaimin of 1915 reads, "During the meal at noon there will be a big drawing when the men will secure girls for the dance through some roulette wheel contrivance. Each male member of the school will be forced to draw for his lady and the name will be publicly announced so that everyone may know who is chosen." Today an evening dance in the Student Union climaxes the day.

Everyone Is Busy

"There's not much work left to do anymore," Dean A. L. Stone of the journalism school said. In 1934 students on FERA help had already cleaned the campus and the day was not very successful. But after that enough work was found to keep everyone busy in the morning.

In Stone's office hangs a picture of Aber with a rake in his hand on the first Aber day. Another picture shows Dr. W. P. Clark, professor of classical languages, and Charles Bloom, assistant professor of forestry, in working clothes, busy cleaning the campus grounds. "Daddy Aber was what his photo shows," Stone said, "frail, quiet, earnest and intensely loyal. Any criticism of the university was to him a personal affront. His interest in students led him to efforts—moral, mental and financial—to help them in any way that he could."

Began Teaching in 1894

Aber began teaching on the campus in 1894 and continued until his death in 1920. On the following commencement it was planned to present him with an honorary doctor's degree, but during the summer he died in Connecticut, where he had gone to spend the vacation.

Naomi Babson Will Address Matrix Guests

Noted Writer Scheduled To Talk at Honor Table April 30

Miss Babson was born in Massachusetts and attended Radcliffe college. After leaving Radcliffe, she secured a position in the English department of Lingnan university, Canton, China. While living in the Far East she wrote most of her first novel, "The Yankee Bodleys," a story of her native New England. Published in 1936, this story was acclaimed as the best American novel of the year and was given the award "Prix Femina Americain" by a committee of Frenchmen in Paris.

Babson Writes of China

Best known of Miss Babson's novels is "All the Tomorrows," a story contrasting the old China with the new, starting with 1860 and ending with recent times. "Hard to lay down . . . hard to forget," was the New York Times review of this book, which is on the university library's Open Shelf.

Miss Babson was compared favorably with Pearl Buck as a writer of China when this book was published. In her own words, "All the Tomorrows" refused to be written . . . those years in China were a rich experience, a country and a people so much loved—and there was the Japanese war threatening to make an end of a whole civilization."

Lives in Bozeman

Naomi Lane Babson lives in Bozeman, where her husband, Paul Grieder, is a member of the English department at Montana State college.

Many of Miss Babson's short stories have appeared in popular

He had planned to retire the next year.

One of the best stories told about Aber is the one in which he was voluntarily drafted for janitor duties. Bill Anderson, a law student who played on the football team, was basement janitor of Main hall. The team was scheduled to play in Bozeman one weekend and Anderson could find no one to do his work while he was gone. Aber told him that he'd see to it the work was done.

The day of the game came, and someone drifted to the basement of Main hall and found Aber on hands and knees scrubbing the floor.

Line Addresses Business Seniors On Job Finding

Students have an even better opportunity to secure jobs this year than in 1929, and as help is hard to get, applicants have the unusual chance of a choice of positions in their field, R. C. Line, dean of the business administration school, said last night. Line addressed business administration seniors in Craig hall on the subject, "How to find a job."

Line said many people find it hard to market themselves, and to do it successfully applicants should state exactly their qualifications, experiences and descriptions. Mrs. Brenda F. Wilson, assistant professor of business administration, gave instructions about writing letters of application at the meeting.

Miss Babson's publishers, Reynal & Hitchcock, Inc., commented, "A glittering new talent in contemporary American fiction has come out of New England via China. Kitt Reports War Fever Mounts

AWS Representatives Return From National Convention

War fever seems to be sweeping the colleges of the nation, with the University of Nebraska going to the extreme by installing a first-aid course in preparation for defense, Maribeth Kitt, Missoula, AWS president, said Tuesday in a report on her trip to the AWS national convention at Lubbock, Texas. She and Peggy Kitt, Missoula, were Montana delegates.

Most of the representatives were in a state of excitement, as if war was about to descend on the United States, Miss Kitt said. Open forum topics showed a trend toward that belief as co-eds thrashed out the position of women in national defense, social changes in existing war, draft marriages and stated that women must be prepared to assume leadership in what was intimated as a coming crisis.

An interesting feature of the conclave was a discussion of Pan-Americanism by a noted feminine law professor of the University of Mexico, who declared that despite its internal division, Mexico wholeheartedly desires to be a friend of the American people and that if the easy-going Yankee were instilled with some of the enthusiasm of his southern neighbors, an ideal individual would result, said Miss Kitt.

In conclusion, Miss Kitt reported on the activities of other AWS chapters throughout the United States, stressing point systems, hours, co-ed projects and other phases of AWS.

The GRIZZLY PARADE

By J. ROY ELMS

For 17 years the Montana state collegiate record for the discus throw has stood at 144 feet 6 inches. The record was set by John Shaffer way back in 1924. If Gene Clawson, husky three-sport Grizzly athlete can break his jinx of turning in his best performance at tossing the plate during the middle of the week and faltering Saturday afternoon, a new state discus throw record is due to be set Saturday afternoon. Clawson has been steadily improving at tossing the weight since coming to the university. However, his performances in meets have never been up to his practice tosses. His best attempt in a meet has always been around 140 feet, while he constantly reached 145 feet in practice.

G. Clawson

In workouts this year, the big Grizzly has shown even more improvement with each workout and in practice his best throw was better than 148 feet, three feet and a half better than the state record. Clawson is still improving with each workout and should be able to break 150 feet before the end of the season. He might even toss the platter 155 feet before the season ends.

If he can break the jinx and set a new state record, Clawson will have little trouble taking firsts in most of Montana's dual meets and should win some points in the Pacific Coast conference meet.

Time trials Saturday showed several of the Grizzlies progressing rapidly toward mid-season form and gave Coach Adams a look at his freshman prospects.

The Grizzlies appeared particularly strong in the quarter-mile, with four men turning in good times. Co-Captain Bill Murphy stepped the distance in 51.5 seconds; Earl Fairbanks, 51.6; Al Cullen, 52 flat, and Ed Murphy, 53.8.

George Ryffel put the shot 44 feet and John Reagan and Joe Taylor high jumped 5 feet 7 1/2 inches. Harry Hesser, best high jumper on the squad, is out with a sprained ankle and may not enter Saturday's meet against Eastern Washington college. Hesser has cleared 5 feet 11 inches in practice.

In the mile run Co-Captain Ole Ueland turned in the best time, 4 minutes 48.3 seconds. Bob Canup, frosh prospect, went the distance in 4 minutes 48.8 minutes. Canup also ran the half-mile in 2 minutes 15 seconds.

Phil Yovetich and Al Cullen showed well in the hurdles. Yovetich ran the lows in 26.6 seconds with Cullen finishing almost a dead heat with him. Yovetich ran the high in 16.6 seconds.

Ben Tyvand and Gene Shockley were other freshmen to look good in the trials. Tyvand stepped the low hurdles in 28.2 seconds. Shockley turned in a 10.7 hundred, a 23.8 furlong, high-jumped 5 feet 4 inches and pole-vaulted 10 feet.

Lawyers Plan High Court

Law seniors met Monday to make plans for the annual Aber day high court program. The committee in charge of the legal satire will be Will Baucus, Great Falls; Jim Browning, Belt, and Walter Coombs, Missoula.

Each year the court tries campus celebrities and delinquent love birds for numerous and diabolical crimes and prescribes public punishment as an unjust reward.

"The cast for this year's court has not yet been chosen," said Coombs, "but we are keeping our ear to the ground for good gossip—and we are getting it, too."

Ranger Interviews Forestry Seniors

Forty-four forestry students interested in national park service as a career and men who desire temporary employment during the coming summer as park rangers or other national park work were interviewed this week by Maynard Barrows, assistant chief ranger of Yellowstone National park.

Barrows, a member of the Yellowstone wild life and improvements department, visited the university in place of "Babe" LaMoue, chief ranger.

PSK Willow Wielders Outhit Mavericks; Lose 5-2

Although outhit three to one, Mavericks chalked up a 5-2 triumph at the expense of Phi Sigma Kappa in Interfraternity diamond play yesterday.

Both teams were tied 2-all at the end of the first inning. Numerous Phi Sig errors allowed the Independents to score one run in the fourth inning and two more in the fifth while they held their opponents scoreless.

Goldstein's double, which drove in the two Phi Sig runs, was the only extra-base blow of the game.

Twenty Alums Plan Sociology Foundation

Approximately 20 sociology alums from Missoula will meet at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night in the Student Union building to lay the groundwork for a Missoula Alumni foundation, Dr. Harold Tascher, assistant professor of sociology, said yesterday. J. H. Roe, '36, field supervisor of the state department of public welfare, western district, will be in charge of the meeting.

After preliminary plans for organization are drawn up, Tascher said, the foundation will contact the university administration to receive permission to integrate its work with that of the Social Work lab.

Both organizations will work toward the same ends, with the foundation supplying a necessary alum tie-up, because there are many graduates in the field who desire to further or aid the work of the lab and so far have found no medium through which to do so, Tascher explained.

Political Science Is Radio Topic

Political science on the Montana campus and in other universities and colleges was the topic last night of Campus Congress, weekly radio program explaining the different branches of the university.

Eileen Deegan, Missoula, was chairman. Harold Nelson, Anaconda; Marcus Daly, Missoula; Jack Brittan, Bozeman; Jack Donaldson, Missoula, and Roy Chapman, Bellflower, Calif., took part in the program.

Lab Workers Will Aid Ravalli Agency

Dr. Harold Tascher, director of Social Work lab; M. C. Wren, instructor in economics; Cecil Smith, Helena, head of the lab's Ravalli research project, and Hal Ekern, Thompson Falls, project member, met in Stevensville last night with the Ravalli County Improvement association to discuss ways in which the lab will aid in solving the county's problems.

The lab Ravalli research project was inspired by a "show-me" trip conducted in September by the Forest service for professors who participated in the annual public administration course. During the trip, Ravalli county problems, chief of which are the diminishing tax base and the necessity to maintain the income, were brought to the fore and furnished the inspiration for creation of the lab project.

The lab unit serves as an advisory body and co-operating county planning agency, investigating and suggesting procedure for solution of problems to the Ravalli County Improvement association.
